THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.
By the Governor of Wisconsin.

A PROCLAMATION.
Another year of health, peace and prosperity has been vouchsafed to the people of Wisconsin, in a beneficent manner to acknowledge in a fitting manner their gratitude to Almighty God and dependence on him for the blessing of His providence.
Wherefore, in obedience to the custom of the country, now wisely sanctioned by law, and conforming to the recent proclamation of the President of the United States, in that behalf, I, William H. Smith, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, do hereby appoint
Thursday, the 22d day of November, 1878, as a day of public thanksgiving and praise; and I recommend to all the people of Wisconsin, on that day, to show forth their gratitude, by liberal benefactions to the poor, by visits to the sick and to the afflicted, and by such religious and social festivities as shall comport with the ceremony and best enable them to praise the Lord; to make known His deeds among the people and to testify to the truth of His promises.
In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereunto affixed, at Madison, Wis., this 19th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.
By the Governor: WILLIAM H. SMITH.
JAMES B. WATSON, Secretary of State.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The Oshkosh Northwestern thinks it is about time for the Janesville Gazette, the Chicago Inter-Ocean and other public papers to stop charging the Administration with any responsibility regarding the condition of things in the South. The Northwestern believes that no President could change the state of affairs in that part of the country, and that the stern logic of events forced President Hayes to adopt the policy which has been a prominent feature of his Administration for the past twenty months. We do not blame the President for trying his Southern policy.
At the time his administration was inaugurated there existed a condition of things which seemed to call for a change.
Grant's policy, which in some respects was as mild as that of Hayes, did not stop the outrage nor the frauds in the South. Under his administration murders were committed, intimidations were practiced, frauds were perpetrated, and Republicans were virtually disfranchised. When the question arose as to who was elected Governor of Louisiana, Packard or Nichols, President Grant for the first time began to shrink the responsibility which was placed on his shoulders. An appeal was made to him by the Republican Committee who went South to look after the interests of the Republicans, to sustain Packard, as he was legally and rightfully entitled to the office. He refused to recognize Packard or give him any protection or support; and finally, as days passed, the Republican administration of Louisiana felt its power weakening, and before President Hayes took the chair, Packard's administration collapsed, and Nichols became the acknowledged Governor of the State. We think Grant did wrong in not protecting Packard, because facts go to prove that he was rightfully elected. President Hayes continued the policy which marked the latter part of Grant's administration, except that he was far more pacific, and seemed inclined to conciliate the Confederates, or rather the Democrats in the South, at the expense of the Republicans and the party;
in other words, he applied the gospel maxim to politics, caring for his enemies and leaving his friends to care for themselves.

After a little more than twenty months of trial, we have discovered, and so has the President, that reconciliation don't reconcile, and that for the Democrats appointed to office, for the many favors shown the South, for the kindest manner in which the South and her people have been treated, and for the President's manifest regard for the social, material, and political prosperity of that portion of the United States, bad faith has been returned. The Democratic politicians of the South have broken their pledges with the President. He attempted, with the promised aid of the leading politicians of the South, to establish a new order of things in the Southern States, but these politicians have proved false. They have "attained infamous objects by diabolical means," and are going from bad to worse. Republicans are disfranchised, and by the powerful argument which lies in the shot gun, the pistol, and the knife, they have made the South solidly Democratic.

This is the condition of affairs at present.
What is to be done? Who is to blame?
What course would an Northwestern suggest which would put an end to murders and frauds? Something must be done, and that quickly. If the Administration can't stop such proceedings, there is no use of having a Government. If the Southern politicians, and in fact the Southern people, mock the President in his efforts to secure peace and harmony in the South, he should no longer insist upon continuing a policy which he is convinced, is a shameless farce.
It is not power in the courts to defend the defenceless, and to protect the weak, the Southern people should be made again to feel the influence of a musket in the hands of a United States soldier. If this be the only means which will secure every man the right to vote in the South, why will protect him in his home and in his property, let the army be employed.

THEIR POSITION IN BRIEF.

The question as to what the banks will do after the first of January, is an important one, for in their hands is the power to help resumption. They want to aid Secretary Sherman to carry out the re-suspension act, but they do not want to obey the law. They want to resume, but it is after their own plan, and not according to the law passed by Congress. What they propose to do is plainly stated by Mr.
Robert Bliss, the Vice President of the Bank of New York. The interview with a correspondent is a long one, but the questions and answers bearing directly on the plan of the banks to the residence of W. M. Petrie, on J street, between Eighth and Ninth, where Mrs. Petrie took him in charge, and where he still remains, full of life and happiness, and evidently well satisfied with his new home.

This morning the little boy was furnished with a full outfit of modern clothing, and a new suit by E. Lyon and W. M. Petrie, and to-day he has been visited by a large number of ladies and gentlemen, many of whom let some token of feeling for the little orphan.

The boy will be kept here until it can be learned who are the proper relatives to send him to in San Francisco, or Oakland, and will be sent forward from here with a tag from the Masonic 'fraternity' of this city to their brethren at the Bay.

When he was taken from the cars yesterday a lady passenger, en route to Sauk Rapids, stated that she was abundantly able to provide for the boy, and expressed a wish to be allowed to adopt him; but he will be sent to his relatives before any steps are taken regarding his future.

He also carried credentials from the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of Louisiana. This letter recites the circumstances of the death of the boy's parents from the yellow fever and the sending of him to California, and concludes thus:

"To a child of his tender years the journey is one fraught with difficulties, dangers and dangers, and he will need the kind offices and protection of all humane people he may meet, and to all I commend him with the hope that for the time being he may be regarded as their own."

The seal of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana is attached to the above.

He also had with him a letter from D. N. Welch, General Superintendent of the Pullman Palace Car Company, instructing all Pullman car conductors to look after the boy and give him every attention in their power. Also, a card from Charles Huber, stenographer of the L. & N. & Great Southern Railway, at Louisville, Kentucky, on which was written: "Master Walter Wilcox—May Heaven guard and speed him on his journey, is the wish of his friend, Charles Huber."

CALIFORNIA EXTRAVAGANZE.

How Sudden Riches Induce Prodigality.

From the San Francisco Alta, October 31.

Of all people the most extravagant are the Californians. They not only spend more absolutely because they earn more, but they spend more relatively. The great motive of economy—fear of the future—is much weaker here than elsewhere. A large part of the population are solitary men, who think that no matter what they can always earn a living, and soon accumulate a little money again. Poverty is not accompanied by the same privations or the same social discredit here as in older communities. The Californian who has conducted himself as a gentleman knows that many of his old acquaintances, even if they were not his friends when he was prosperous, will give him aid in his need. It is not in them to turn their backs; sentiment and custom require them to be generous. The frequency of the great and sudden changes from poverty to wealth and from wealth to poverty, breeds a feeling of obligation to one another. Many unfortunates do not get the benefit of this mutual helpfulness, but others do, and it influences the general mode of life.

The tendency of the business of California toward speculation has the effect of stimulating people to immediate enjoyment. Before the completion of the telegraph across the continent, merchants and capitalists were full of large risks and sudden turns. A few weeks might see a change from a scarcely a glut, or from a glut to a scarcity. There was no regularity in price or supplies. After the opening of the Comstock Lode, the shares were thrown into the San Francisco market, and by their remarkable fluctuations, became its most remarkable feature. The rapid rise in city lots and agricultural lands, under the influence of great additions to the population, added to the fondness for bold pecuniary ventures. Never did any country offer bair so numerous or so seductive to the gambling appetite, which is strong in human nature, and usually breaks out strongly wherever it has a chance. A Government that does not prohibit lotteries and gambling games—even those conducted honestly, if many have been, on the principle of giving only 50 or 75 cents in return for $1—justly considered an accomplice in the "improvement" of the people.

The spirit of '49 has not died out. Many of those who were here in the flush era of the early placer-mining have not rid themselves of its influence. Our local experience has proved that nothing does so much to ruin men generally as a sudden change to high wages. There never was a more extravagant, wasteful and dissipated set of men than the old placer-miners. They who had been sober and industrious, and had saved money when they earned $16 a month, before coming to California, became idle and drunken, and saved nothing when they earned $200. They spent as fast as they made their money. This was not the universal rule, but the custom was more common than elsewhere. Poverty is the mother of economy. The barren soil of France and New England, and the fruitful farms of France, are the best breeding places for this. Wellington told that a French army could subsist in comfort, and a Spanish army in luxury, with supplies on which a English army would starve.

The evidence of Californian extravagance are to be seen on every side. The dwellings, furniture, table and dress of the people indicate very liberal expenditure. San Francisco has the reputation of buying the most costly wines, cigars and silks. A saying not deserving to be dignified as a proverb, declares that "New York does not get better than Paris, and San Francisco better than New York." The magnificent hotels and the palaces of a dozen millionaires are unsurpassed, if equally, by anything short of royalty in the luxury of their appointments. There is a large demand for the best that can be had. California consumes 20,000 dozen of genuine sparkling wine annually, and the Atlantic slope, with fifty times as many people, does not consume ten times as much champagne. California uses 60 pounds of sugar to the person in a year, the Atlantic slope 25, Great Britain 40, France and Holland each 20, and Italy 7. Coffee is sold to the extent of 1 pound each for the inhabitant in Great Britain and Italy, 3 in France, 5 in Germany, 10 in this State and 7 in the other States. Of the average Californian drink 6 pounds in a twelvemonth, the other American 2, the Briton 4, the Frenchman and Italian less than a quarter of a pound. The figures for the consumption of many other articles of comfort and luxury are incomplete, a large proportion of our imports coming through New York, and paying duty there and being forwarded to California under circumstances that leave no opportunity to ascertain their value or amount. Though it consumes largely of foreign goods imported at New York, with one-fifth of the population it pays one-third of the customs at San Francisco; and the average consumption of foreign products is at least twice as great here as on the Atlantic slope. The extravagance of which we have spoken is not confined to a few; it is characteristic of the community generally, and it is worse, relatively, among the poor than the rich. Many of the wealthy families owe their wealth to simplicity of life more than to large gains.

The Learned Blacksmith.

Elihu Burritt, the learned blacksmith, as he is popularly called on account of his acquaintance with thirty or forty ancient and modern languages, has been the greater part of his life much more interested in the subject of international peace than in the questions of philology. As early as 1814, when he was about 33, he removed from New Britain, Conn., to Worcester, Mass., where he edited and published the Christian Intelligencer, an advocate of a peaceful solution of all questions arising between countries. To the same purpose he delivered many lectures, and went to England where he formed the League of Universal Brotherhood, whose object was to employ all legitimate means to abolish war throughout the world. He resided at Birmingham for years as United States consul, writing, speaking and laboring to his utmost, wherever he might be, for the cause he holds so dear. He has attended, and has been a prominent figure in all the peace congresses held at different times in Brussels, Paris, Frankfurt, London, and Edinburgh. Fifty years ago he is said to have felt confident that universal peace would be established in his time; but now he has grave doubts of it, which he may well have, as he is near 67, and not in the best of health. Before the middle of this century, many persons of Burritt's way of thinking believed that day of universal peace drawing near. But since then much has occurred to shake their faith.

Parr's Pills and Picture Papers.

Mr. Ingram, M. P. for E. ton, is the proprietor of the Illustrated London News, and son of Mr. Herbert Ingram, M. P., who 15 or 20 years ago went down in a steamer on Lake Michigan. The rise of the Ingram family is a wonderful instance of luck. Herbert Ingram, petty, was in a very humble circumstance, "doing odd jobs" about the house of a doctor in Boston, Lincolnshire, when the latter in an amiable mood gave him a receipt for making a certain pill and told him there was money to be got out of the sale thereof. Forthwith Ingram made up pills and began to sell them from a stall in the ancient market place of Boston. The pills are said to have been really good, and anyhow they had reached a fair local sale when Ingram came across an ex-clergyman, whose bibulous tendencies had "pulled his gown over his ears" and "unfrosted" him. The person was a smart man and put Ingram up to a shrewd move. A learned and interesting life of "Old Parr," the Methuselah of English history was prepared, embellished with a portrait of the aged hero, obtained from the British Museum; and Ingram's pills became "Old Parr's Pills," advertised to the world as the cause of Old Parr's longevity and an infallible means of promoting health and long life. "Old Parr's Life Pills" were a grand success, and Herbert Ingram speedily acquired money enough to start the Illustrated London News, a property worth $200,000 a year.—London Letter to Philadelphia Times.

BRIEFLETS.

—The militiamen drill to-night.
—A good-bye to all bad "By-Joes."
—The Mutual Improvers meet to-night.
—Human souls should be looked after in this weather.

—Rev. Mr. Sewell gave the Methodist folks last night some lively talk in favor of cold water as a beverage.

—Milwaukee street bridge is being re-planked in a substantial manner, the planks being laid diagonally. The improvement was greatly needed.

—Rev. Jenk L. Jones occupied the Assembly Chamber at Madison, yesterday, preaching to a goodly-sized audience, who listened to him eagerly.

—Thanksgiving day is to be observed by a union service at Court Street Methodist church, with a sermon by Rev. Mr. Chapell, of the Baptist church.

—The Congregational church society will give a literary entertainment consisting of reading, music, etc., to be followed by an oyster supper, at Lippitt's hall tomorrow evening.

—James Brown was before Justice Balch this morning on a charge of assaulting Will Farrall. The affair took place in Black Hawk and was not of a very serious nature. The case was continued.

—Another telephonic line has been put up, connecting Dr. Palmer's office with Prentice & Evenson's drugstore. The drug store folk propose establishing several other lines from their places of business.

—Marshall Keating dropped onto two tramps last night, and escorted them to Colley's cooler. They were well armed, having two razors and four knives. They were prowling about West Milwaukee street in a suspicious manner.

—The reception and dance of the Janesville Guards next Friday evening at Apollo hall promises to be a grand success. You can have a joyous time and help the boys along in their enterprise by buying a pastebowl and attending—with your lady, of course.

—A man named Melborn was assaulted Saturday night, on West Milwaukee street. His assailant accused him of insulting his sister. Melborn denied the charge, and retaliated by the energetic use of a broken broomstick. No blood shed, and no arrests.

—Yesterday afternoon Marshal Keating was called in to settle a little family trouble between Jim Wood and his wife. Mrs. Wood charged her Jim with knocking her down, kicking her, and otherwise acting unlike a true husband. The Marshal accordingly merched Jim down to the lock-up.

—As there is no immediate prospect of the Janesville Guards sniffing the smoke of battle, they are trying to content themselves with the smoke of an elegant brand of cigars, named "The Janesville Guards." Croft & Sherer have them in their case, and the smoking of them is not confined to the military, as any one who has a mickle to spare, can try one.

—The sad news comes from Harmony that Mr. N. Rose, an old and respected citizen of that town, died this morning, of erysipelas. Mr. Rose was a native of New York State and settled in this county in 1839. He was known as an industrious and intelligent farmer, and not only had many friends in his own neighborhood, but throughout the county, who will be saddened by the tidings of his death. The funeral will be held next Wednesday at 11 o'clock a. m., at his late residence.

—Those belonging to and interested in Court Street Methodist church have made the preliminary arrangements for the organization of a literary society for the winter, the meetings to be every two weeks. The first time entertainment is to be given Tuesday evening, November 26th, in the Sunday school room. These entertainments are to be varied, and at each meeting new and pleasing features will be presented. The Sunday school of the same church is also preparing a Christmas entertainment.

—The report that Mrs. J. Maurice Smith had received intelligence that a large fortune had been left her by relatives in England, is true except that she has not received that intelligence, has no such relatives there, and no fortune has been left her. The report is supposed to have started from the fact that a woman who formerly lived here, in the family of A. Hyatt Smith, and whose maiden name was Mary Roberts, fell her some five years ago to a large amount of money, left her by her husband. Among the conditions of the will was that she should reside in England nine months each year. A few years ago she visited Janesville. These facts have in some way got twisted into the form of a fresh news item about another person.

THE WEATHER.

The thermometer at 7 o'clock this morning stood at 35 degrees above zero and at 2 o'clock this afternoon at 49 degrees above.

The indications today are, for the lake region, partly cloudy weather, westerly winds, backing to warmer southeasterly, stationary or falling barometer.

DEATH OF MRS. BAKER.

Mrs. Aline W. Baker, the widowed mother of Capt. C. W. Baker, died in this city yesterday morning, in the sixty-third year of her age. Mrs. Baker was born in New York, being the daughter of Rev. J. Ward, a Universalist clergyman. She became the wife of Rev. Joseph Baker, who was a minister of like faith, and with her husband came to this city in 1850, and has resided here since. She leaves many friends behind to mourn her death, and sympathize with the bereaved relatives. Mrs. Baker had been ailing for some weeks, but was considered better, and last Wednesday went for a short visit with the family of her brother-in-law, Mr. Phillip Baker. While there her disease took an unfavorable turn and she grew rapidly worse and died yesterday morning. The funeral services were held this afternoon Rev. J. L. Jones and Rev. G. W. Lawrence officiating.

PRACTICING AT THE BAR.

Another Attempt to Break Jail by Sawing Off the Bars of the Windows.

The boys at the jail seem discontented and anxious to get a sniff of the air of freedom. Sheriff Colley and his assistants have to sleep now with one eye open to thwart the cunning designs which their boarders are continually devising, and thus far the best laid plans of the would-be jail-breakers have been thwarted. Yesterday the Sheriff had his suspicions aroused and commenced a search through the cells. It was discovered that young Lee, who has taken a change of venue to Walworth county, had hidden in his bed three saws and two files. Shurt, the fellow charged with stealing barley, had gone to Lee's cell after the latter had vacated it, and taken the saws and files and hid them in his straw tick. On being questioned the prisoners all denied knowing anything about the presence or existence of any such implements and Shurt protested his innocence more earnestly than any of the others. All the straw ticks were taken from the cells and emptied, and the saws and files were found in Shurt's bed. Even then he declared that he did not know how they came there. Further examination showed that the work of sawing off the bars, which protected the windows, had already commenced, and had not the plot been thus revealed there would probably have been a jail break to report at an early date. It appears that some one, or ones, has been prowling about the jail during the night-time and placing the tools on the window ledges so that when the prisoners were let out into the corridors during the day they could get these tools and set to work. Last night a fellow was seen suspiciously near the jail, and was identified as a resident of this city. Whether he was there for any such purpose of helping prisoners escape, or not, remains to be proved. The Sheriff is sharp-eyed and his assistants are watchful, and the boys will have to show unusual shrewdness if they manage to get loose. This is the third attempt made within a week, and in each case have the officials shown themselves too sharp to be caught napping. At present the jail contains a number of shrewd ones, who have had experience in jail before, and they seem determined to get free if possible. The saws which were captured were made from clock springs, and the files were used to keep them sharp.

RIGS FOR THE ROAD.

Hodge & Buchholz are making a fine display at their carriage shops. Some of the buggies are really elegant in finish as well as of durable make. Among the novelties is a buggy fitted with self-oiling axles, so arranged as to run from one to three years with one oiling. No sand or grit can get into the axle and no oil can get out to spot the clothes or daub the hub. They have many other little novelties in their work, which make the display an interesting one even to a novice. They have also a fine display of sleighs and cutters of various patterns, fitted and painted in a very rich and attractive manner. It almost makes one wish that it was winter the year around, they seem so cozy and comfortable. All this work is made "on honor," and the firm have been so long established and have sold so much work that it is hardly necessary to say that the buggies and sleighs turned out by them are as durable as they are handsome. Their display is really worth going to see, even if one is not contemplating an immediate purchase. They have just finished a new wagon for Buob & Bro., the brewers, which is also worth looking at. The frame is of gas pipe and other iron work, and the finishing is very attractive and tasteful. In order to make room for displaying and handling their work, they are about paving the gutter and adjacent part of the street, with stone, so that it will be clean and dry. In fact, Hodge & Buchholz are pushing business right along, and doing all in their power to make their enterprise a success, and to satisfy their increasing patronage.

A NIGHT OF THE ROUND TABLE.

The Round Table folk opened their season last Saturday night. There were a large number present, and the programme was an interesting one, the subject of study being "King Lear." Mr. B. F. Dunwiddie gave an analysis of the plot. Rev. A. L. Royce treated the character of Lear. Miss A. Hobart gave choice passages from the play. Prof. Van Cleve discussed the play as a work of art. An enthusiastic discussion as to the function of art closed the literary part of the evening's work. The election of officers was then held with the following result:

President—Rev. T. P. Sawin.
Vice President—B. F. Dunwiddie.
Secretary—Miss Angie King.
Treasurer—Prof. J. P. Haire.
Executive Committee—Mrs. E. B. Haire, Rev. J. W. Sanderson, Miss L. Goodell, Rev. A. L. Royce, Prof. John Van Cleve.

It was decided to hold the meetings hereafter in the rooms of the Young Men's Association.

The next meeting will be held Saturday evening, November 30, the subject being "Thackeray."

SEEKING JUSTICE.

The criminal cases will be put over until next week, owing to the absence of District Attorney Sale who will go to Madison next Wednesday to try the case of the State vs. Frank Richards, which is set for Thursday. A number of others from this city will also go to Madison as witnesses in the case.

The trial of Mrs. Mack will not be commenced until next week.

The Court busied itself today with the civil case of Flynn vs. Madden, which involves a $100 note. The next case to be tried is that of Whitford vs. Goodrich, in which damages are claimed for an alleged slander.

MILTON JUNCTION.

—Rev. Joshua Clarke, and his brother, Dr. Clarke, of Derby, New York, arrived in town, on Monday, in answer to a telegram informing them of the dangerous illness of their mother, Mrs. Maria Clarke, who is living with her daughter, Mrs. G. N. Coon.

—Mr. C. P. Foster having bought the McAdams hotel property, will commence at once to refit, rebuild and renovate the premises entire. It will be a very desirable change in its aspect. It has long been a blot and disgrace to our village, but under its new management we may expect to see it become an ornament to the town, a source of profit to its owner, and a desirable home for the traveling public.

—All mail for Milwaukee, Chicago and the east will hereafter be forwarded by night mail, that is mailed at the office by six p. m.

—Election of officers in the Temple of Honor occurred on Tuesday night last.

—We are invited through the columns of the Register, two weeks since to point out in the columns of that paper the misstatements, evasions and false positions charged in this column against the man Stewart on the eve of the Parker-Stewart Greenback lecture here. We intended in good faith to do so last week, but other duties hindered, and we fear now it is too late. The subject is stale, and Stewart with his false statements, theories and candidate is buried so deep beneath the good sense and better judgment of the majority of the 1st District that we fear would let him rest. New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts have pronounced his statements false, his theories moonshine. Let him rest.

—Mr. J. Bralley, of Suspension Bridge, New York, arrived in town last Tuesday for a short stay to look after his farm and other interests here.

—The repairing of the Morgan house is about completed and shows a very great improvement. Uncle Bill has had the platform front and ends lettered up so nicely that the wayfaring man, though a phool need not go astray.

LOCAL MATTERS.

A CARD.

There seems to be quite an excitement among our merchants, and WHY? Reports are going the rounds that all insurance companies doing business in this city—except one—contain in their policies "THE REMOVAL CLAUSE," which is "in case of the removal of property from a building, in which it is in danger, with designs of preserving it, the company pays a proportion of the actual damage incurred by such removal PRO RATA as the sum insured bears to the whole value of the stock." Now what is this clause? It is a clause which is not usually liable to pay any sort of claims for damage by removal, as your policy only covers loss or damage by fire—NOT BY REMOVAL. This should be remembered, as objections are sometimes made to our policies, on account of the "Pro Rata Clause," by persons who do not understand this fact. You will readily see that the policy that provides for payment of pro rata damage in case of removal, when no damage from fire is sustained, is in effect so much more valuable than one containing no such provision, as it gives the advantage derived by the claimant from the contribution that may be realized under it, greater than though he were compelled to bear the entire loss himself. The pro rata clause is not applied in any case, if any portion of the insured property is damaged by fire or water before its removal. And we would state that in our experience in the insurance business we have never taken advantage of the removal clause, but have paid all damages in full and satisfactory to the assured. This misunderstanding has caused some parties to rescind all contracts—except one—as winks, when in fact their policies are worth more. We continue to issue solid and reliable indemnity to assured, issue policies promptly, at as low rates as possible, and transact all business on principles of commercial honor.
